Some recent questions we've received and are glad to answer:

Now that the Ferry family has moved out of Indonesia, where are you? Home for us is starting to take shape as we unpack boxes, locate stores, and start making friends with those around us, in the country of Taiwan, also known as the Republic of China.

Why Taiwan? The LCMS has had a partner church here for decades, the China Evangelical Lutheran Church, which has gone through some very difficult times in the last 20+ years. The church is small, and needs help in theological education, but they are very welcoming, and eager to be of service. There are multiple benefits to living in this place and having our headquarters here. Among them: Taiwan is centrally-located in Asia, our partner can greatly benefit from our closer relationship, the cost of living here is very reasonable, it's a safe place to live and raise a family, and they welcome people on missionary/church visas.

So where specifically will you live? The generosity of LCMS donors over the years allowed the local church here to purchase numerous properties, and not all of them are being used. The CELC used to operate a seminary in Chiayi, a city in south-central Taiwan, and the same city where Concordia Middle School (started by LCMS missionaries) is located. This former seminary building was currently unused, and they offered it to the LCMS to use in whatever way we needed. In this building, we're able to do a number of things: provide office and working space for the LCMS Asia regional team, provide space for hosting theological education events, interact with the community and reach out, and house the families of the Asia regional staff. And all of this can happen rent-free because we have such a good relationship with our local partners.

Are there any challenges to this relocation? Apart from the normal challenges of moving with a family of six kids, the main challenge is language. There really isn't much English spoken outside of the capital city, so we have jumped wholly into learning Mandarin Chinese, which is not an easy language to learn. Cheryl and the kids are taking Chinese classes five days per week, and are already making great progress.

What are the opportunities with this new location? The Ferrys are very excited about living in Taiwan, despite the challenges of setting up a new house and learning a new language. Some of the highlights for us are: being able to live rent-free which allows for more of your donation dollars to support the programs of mission work; living in community with other LCMS folks, which is a new experience for us; living in a place where Cheryl and the kids can go out to the park, into the neighborhood, and to the store without being as concerned for their security and safety; having a local congregation to attend and receive Word, Sacrament, and pastoral care (even though it's all in Chinese!), having Daddy working in the same building and home more; hosting regional and education events in the building at low cost. And that's just a few!

Thank you for sticking with us through this transition! Please see the pictures and other updates in this issue, and feel free to reach out to us (charles.ferry@lcmsintl.org or cheryl.ferry@lcmsintl.org) for any other questions you'd like to have addressed. We are overjoyed to be in partnership with you, and to have your ongoing trust, love, and prayers.

The entire Ferry Family has been settling in to our new surroundings by unpacking, exploring, and by using lots of mime and “charades” to communicate with those around us. We have also been getting to know our new church, Salvation Congregation in Chiayi City. Pastor Alex Wu is a good man, and has been a gracious resource for us as he helps us make connections, locate the household necessities, and even transport us to the store occasionally.

This is a very different living situation from what we knew in Indonesia, as we’re living in an apartment rather than a house. Our “flat” is located in a five-story building which also will house members of the community who are not Christian, and not connected with our work [yet!].

We have seen that mail is a little more reliable and predictable here, so if anyone wants to keep in touch, our new address is listed to the right.

If you can’t make sense of the Chinese (in green), don’t worry; you can just use the English and it will get to us.
